THIEVES GET SPOIL

BURGLARS ENTER SELZER RESIDENCE IN ABSENCE OF OWNER AND RANSACK HOUSE

Apparently the warning issued by the chief of police with regard to householders taking special precaution regarding the locking up and watching of their premises was a necessary piece of advice. The usual incursion of thieves and criminals, to which Southern California is subjected every fall, has begun and Glendale is receiving its quota of the army. These professional operators have been increased in numbers by the fact that there are two expositions going on in California this year. It is feared that when the expositions are over there will be fresh proofs of the energy of the criminal brigade.

Sunday evening a call was sent in from the residence of Mrs. O. E. Selzer, 824 S. Central avenue, for the police to investigate a case of housebreaking there. Chief Herald responded and found that the thieves had effected an entrance by the back porch screen door and had then found it easy to enter the house. In order to facilitate their escape they left all the doors and windows open. Apparently the thieves had studied the ways of the household and had ascertained at what hours the family was likely to be out. Between 5 and 6 o'clock at night the housebreaking was accomplished.

When Chief Herald examined the premises he found that the thieves had entered the upstairs rooms and torn out the drawers of the bureaus, throwing their contents on the floor. The rooms were piled with a litter of clothes and personal articles of every description. Whether the thieves knew of the presence of jewelry or not they evidently set out to find it, for they negelected many articles that might have been supposed to have value in their eyes and took only the smaller, more portable and more valuable things.

It is not possible to estimate the extent of the loss, but it is not far from $500 and may easily be more. They found some gold nuggets, a sum of money, two gold watches, one studded with diamonds, diamond bracelets, several valuable keepsakes, gold chains and a number of silver articles.

Chief Herald has been working on some information that may lead to the capture of the thieves. Meantime he reiterates his warning as to the necessity for extra precautions as to tramps and the securing of all premises at night.

MRS. FRANCES H. WALTON IS HONORED

Mrs. M. O. Ryan of the Monte Vista apartments, Hawthorne street, entertained informally Saturday afternoon in honor of Mrs. Frances Hendershott Walton, who is visiting Glendale after an absence of five years.

Mrs. Walton was a co-worker with Mrs. Ryan in the Broadway school for five years. The guests invited were Mrs. Helen Best Barber of Alhambra, Mrs.Lucile Schultz Palmer and Miss Dora Schultz of Los Angeles, Miss Elizabeth B. Paul, Miss Ida M. Waite, Miss Annie L. McIntyre and Miss Lois Hatch of Glendale.

These ladies were all teachers with Mrs. Ryan and her honored guest during the whole or part of the time from 1905 to 1910 at the Broadway building.

Mrs. Evelyn Ryan Wheeler, at one time a pupil of Mrs. Walton, assisted her mother in entertaining these old-time friends.

P. T. A. FEDERATION

The Parent-Teacher Federation has planned to give a reception to the teachers of the Glendale schools, both the high and grammar schools, at the High School auditorium, Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. The public of Glendale is invited to attend, especially the parents who have children in the schools. There will be a free program, light refreshments and a social hour. You are earnestly requested to come and meet your children's teachers.

GET PENSION CHECKS

The pension office today mailed to Washington addresses hundreds of pension checks for Civil war veterans who are attending the G. A. R. encampment here. The checks are usually sent to the veterans at their homes, but the pension office thought some of the old warriors might be in need of money and the payment was made in Washington.

WEATHER FORECAST—Fair tonight and Tuesday; northerly winds.

FOES OF CHILDREN

MEASLES, WHOOPING COUGH, SCARLET FEVER AND DIPHTHERIA ARE ALL DEADLY

With the opening of the public schools come reports to the California State Board of Health of cases of whooping cough, measles, scarlet fever and diphtheria. Most people regard scarlet fever and diphtheria with a certain degree of alarm, but measles and whooping cough are generally regarded as necessities; or at least, as being of minor importance.

Most fatal cases of these diseases occur in children under five years of age, and parents who deliberately expose their children to cases of measles and whooping cough, in order that they may "catch them and have them over with," are taking a very great risk. During the first five years of a child's life special care should be taken to protect him from such exposures. By deferring these diseases to later childhood, the death rate may be greatly lowered.

The chief difficulty in the control of these diseases lies in the fact that they are more "catching" in the early stages, than later. For this reason, any cough or cold in a child just entering school should be regarded with more or less suspicion, the case should be closely watched, and the child isolated, so that if it proves to be measles or whooping cough, contact with other children may be prevented.

During 1914, there were 8,852 cases of measles reported to the California State Board of Health, with 150 deaths; and during the same year, 2,595 cases of whooping cough were reported with 305 deaths. The tragedy does not lie in deaths alone, however, for the complications that often follow are what give these diseases their deadly character. Some health authorities say that tuberculosis follows measles and whooping cough more often than any other of the communicable diseases. However this may be, the wise parent exercises every precaution to protect the child from these diseases, until as late a period in childhood as may be possible.

The control of these diseases is largely in the hands of parents. Every case should be isolated as soon as recognized and report made to the local health officer.

To admit knowingly, a child suffering from either of these diseases, to the schools or picture shows or to any public gathering, is a direct offence against all public health regulations.

GET ACQUAINTED TEA

Mrs. E. H. Willisford, 231 Orange street, has devised a pleasing method of bringing together strangers who may attend the First Congregational church, and some of the older members of that body. When a group of new adherents of the church is found Mrs. Willisford invites them to afternoon tea with three or four of the more prominent members of the church. The afternoon is spent in getting acquainted. When the tea is served all the ladies present assist in getting things ready. This informal uniting of the guests in work soon gives an atmosphere of homelike friendliness to the affair and the strangers feel as if they were made truly welcome, One of these pleasantly informal affairs was given by Mrs. Willisford Saturday. Those invited were:

Mrs. Cunningham, Mrs. Lafferty, Mrs. Soderberg, Mrs. Chambers, Mrs. Storm, Mrs. Williams, Mrs. Cornell, Mrs. Preston, Mrs. Ormsby, Mrs. Haskell, Mrs. Brace, Mrs. Cutter, Mrs. Humphreys, Mrs. Andrews, Mrs. Allen, Mrs. Schlochter, Mrs. Goodrich, Mrs. Atkinson, Mrs. Miner, Mrs. Geo. E. Adams. Some of those invited were not table to attend and thus missed a very enjoyable treat.

INSURANCE MEN MEET

Noted students of social economy whose aim is to promote permanent betterment of the public convened at San Francisco today in the opening session of the World's Insurance congress. The delegates represent more than 100 organizations, including four branches of the United States government, the bureau of mines, standards, commercial economics and war risk insurance. England, Japan, Spain, Australia, India, Portugal, Sweden and South Africa are also represented.

Mrs. D. E. Coates, 128 S. Kenwood, is entertaining her mother, Mrs. Bell, this week.

Contracts will not be let to private firms lest the government secrets should pass into other hands.

WAR AND WATCHES

A. E. DODDS, EXPERT IN TIMEPIECES, SAYS FIGHTING HAS SENT UP PRICES

It is singular how few manufactured articles there are that have not a foreign competitor. Foreign workmen, especially in Germany, work for so much less than American workmen and live on so much more economical a scale that it is difficult for American articles to compete with them when the bars are down and goods are admitted under tariff rules that enable them to undersell the native products.

Mr. A. E. Dodds, watchmaker and engraver, 1111 W. Broadway, said to a representative of the Glendale Evening News: "The watchmaker's business has not been affected by the war to any great degree. With the single exception of watch glasses which are made in Germany there has been little advance in prices. Watch glasses, however, have almost doubled in price.

"There is really no chance of German or Swiss watches competing with American watches of the best class. The foreigner cannot make a watch to equal the Waltham or the Elgin or the Hamilton, or any of the high-grade watches that are made in the United States. The cheap watch, too, is without a rival, just as the cheap American clock is unequaled throughout the world.

"Altogether there has been an improvement in my business since I came to Glendale. I have been here about a year and during that time I have noticed my business grow in a most satisfactory manner. Glendale is a substantial city. The people are mostly well to do and on the whole very loyal to their own city. They spend their money here as much as they possibly can, and this local patronage of local trade is doing more to build up the city than anything else. I look to see a great growth in the prosperity of this city ere long. If there should come soon a realization of the belief that the tide of depression has reached its height and is now on the ebb I should expect Glendale to be one of the first places to show the effects of the rising wave of prosperity."

RECEPTION FOR FIFTY YOUNG PEOPLE

The beautiful home of A. B. Heacock and wife, 507 W. 9th street, was the scene last Friday evening of a happy gathering of young people of the Christian church. The men's and women's Bible classes gave a reception that evening to the young people of the next four classes. Nearly 50 were present and the evening was most enjoyably spent in games and conversation. Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served.

PLAN TO FIGHT JITNEYS

Plans for combatting the jitney competition and ways of teaching the public the value of properly operated electric carriers were taken up today by delegates to the Panama Pacific exposition convention of the American Electric Railway association and its half dozen affiliated organizations. An attendance of 5000 is expected.

Leaders of the association declared the electric railway industry today is under fire. It is being subjected, they claim, to undue criticism on the one hand and is being "burglarized" by the jitney on the other hand.

In addition to prominent electric railway officials who will address the delegates during the five days of the convention there will Gov. Hiram Johnson of California, ex-Senator Jonathan Bourne, Jr., Bion J. Arnold, one of the foremost electrical engineers of the world; Ivy Lee, former assistant to the president of the Pennsylvania railroad, and now of the personal staff of John D. Rockefeller.

GOOD ROADS CONGRESS

With 3000 enthusiastic good roads advocates present from a dozen midwestern states, the Northwestern Road Congress got down to business at Cedar Rapids today for a three days' session. Governor George W. Clarke and city officials welcomed the visitors and experts from Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota, Illinois and the Dakotas told of progress in good road making.

Mr. Charles Shropshire, 445 Everett street, and John S. Guest are about to start for Little Rock, twenty miles from Palmdale. They have a 320-acre homestead at that place, where they will raise alfalfa, hogs and chickens.

ON CHARGE OF MURDER

CAPLAN AND SCHMIDT ON TRIAL AS ALLEGED ACCOMPLICES IN DYNAMITING TIMES

M. A. Schmidt, alleged accomplice of H. B. McNamara in the dynamiting of the Los Angeles Times building, and the death of 20 employes, went to trial in Judge Frank R. Willis' court here today on a charge of murder.

David Caplan, who is also charged with murder in the same connection, will be tried after the Schmidt case is disposed of.

Special Prosecutor Noel of Indianapolis, who figured in the trial of the alleged dynamiters there, opened the fight for the state. He was assisted by District Attorney Woolwine and Deputy District Attorneys Van Cott and Keyes.

For the defense Judge C. H. Fairall and Attorney Moore appeared. The indictment was read to the first twelve prospective jurors and other talesmen assembled in the courtroom and the fight to get an impartial jury began.

The principal witness for the prosecution is Ortie McManigal, confessed dynamiter, who turned state's evidence. There are 200 other prosecution witnesses. The chief effort of the state will be to prove Schmidt had a hand in loading the dynamite aboard a launch at Giant, Cal., and transporting it to a spot near Los Angeles, where it was unloaded.

Schmidt expects to prove an alibi.

One of the main state witnesses, a little Italian boy who was on the wharf while the powder was being loaded, is dead. The state depended on him to identify the accused.

Union labor is taking quite an interest in the present trial, but funds have not been freely donated. This necessitated a change in attorneys soon after Schmidt and Caplan were arrested. Thus far, they have had several different sets of counsel. A number of labor bodies, however, quite recently pledged their support to the accused, believing in their innocence.

The big courtroom was besieged by a huge crowd today, extra guards being called upon to restrain those demanding admittance.

Both Schmidt and Caplan disappeared after the McNamaras were captured. They vanished completely and it was rumored both were dead. The men were caught by Burns detectives about a year ago.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

A large congregation heard at the morning service an unusually spiritual discourse on the subject of "Prayer," ushering in a week of prayer in the churches. Rev. Edmonds selected for his text James 5: 16, "The supplication of a righteous man availeth much in the working," this being the revised version. The speaker maintained that there can be no great and successful work without the use of prayer, that it is idle to doubt its efficacy and gave as an instance the great work accomplished by George Newell who secured through the instrumentality of prayer the immense sum of eight million dollars for the support of the great work that he carried on. Prayer is not for emergencies, it is for the every-day life, a matter that must be prosecuted earnestly, remembering that Jacob wrestled with the angel and would not let him go until he obtained the blessing . We should have a program of prayer and adhere strictly to it. David called upon the Lord day and night. Prayer is the channel of communication between us and God, he has furnished it to us and invited us to use it, let us prove him by taking him at his word.

ONE YEAR AGO TODAY

The French war office admitted that the allied forces had been forced to fall back slightly after terrific fighting, but declared that the situation in general was satisfactory.

The German army headquarters declared that the battle in the Argonne district was proceeding successfully. Three Antwerp forts were declared captured. It was announced that the left wing of the Russian army had been defeated and 2000 prisoners taken.

Petrograd reported that the Russians were prepared to make another attempt to invade East Prussia.

Vienna declared that the Servians and Montenegrins were being driven from Bosnia. This was denied by the Servians.

German forces have been engaged by the French in the Belgian Congo.

WAR DRAWS LIKE A VORTEX

How difficult it is for neutral nations to avoid being drawn into the great war is seen both in the case of the United States and of Bulgaria. With a man at the helm determined to keep the vessel of state's head to the open sea and away from the dangers of the lee shore, the United States has successfully weathered points where the tide of war might have swept her on to the shifting sands of European conflict.

Bulgaria, also has a man at the head of her national interests, who has been carefully watching the conflict and seeking to discover wherein not the safety and honor of the country, but the profit of the land and its ruler might lie. President Wilson has cautiously but honorably avoided the Scylla of war and the Charybdis of meek acquiescence in German destruction of American life and property. Czar Ferdinand of Bulgaria has watched like a spider from his den and come out like a greedy devourer the moment he thought that he could throw his army into the balance.

It is all a game to a man like Ferdinand. He comes of the Saxe-Coburg-Gotha line. He is an Austrian nobleman with vast Austrian estates. His queen is a German princess. It must also be remembered, however, that his grandfather was Louis-Philippe of France. Czar Ferdinand has been married twice. His first wife was a Bourbon of old French kingly stock. All his children were born of the first marriage. It may be that these diverse family relations have been the cause of so much halting between two opinions; or it may be simply the o'er-vaulting ambition of a petty prince who has had the vanity to dub himself "czar" and who is hearkening to the voice of the charmer who promises him greater dominion.

Whatever may be the cause, Ferdinand is at present causing much anxiety in Europe. It is said that German officers are arriving by the score in Bulgaria and that is taken as a sign that a pact has been concluded between the Kaiser and the ruler of the Bulgars by which the Bulgarian army will be schooled and drilled in German ways and methods and an attempt made by its means to force a passage through to Turkey.

It is, however, quite a game of chess, this European war. The Kaiser is quite willing to advance and if necessary sacrifice a pawn like Bulgaria, for that is doubtless the value he sets on this Balkan country, if he can only get into Constantinople. British troops are advancing on Turkey by way of Bagdad; British and French forces are fighting on the Gallipoli peninsula and it should not be long before the way to the ancient Byzantium is forced.

Greece and Roumania stand ready to enter the war at any moment. Bulgaria is endeavoring to gain time by declaring that she has only ordered mobilization for defense; but no one believes that. Should the Germano-Austro-Bulgarian combine attempt to break through to Turkey it will be met by Anglo-Franco-Italo-Greco-Roumanian forces. It seems almost impossible at this moment for these countries to keep out of the vortex.

War is a fever. It is infectious in the highest degree. The mere fact that fighting is going on stirs the human blood and urges the man or the nation to enter the arena. That looks as though one were saying that men are little better than tigers or lions. As a matter of fact they are worse; for the lion or tiger never kills except for food. War is a heady matter. It is similar to a riot on the street. It drags into its vortex all within reach. There is an irresponsibility in numbers that has a vast fascination to men and nations alike.

CONDITION OF THE RUSSIAN ARMY

To read some newspaper accounts one would imagine that the Russian army is thoroughly demoralized and beaten and that the Poles in Warsaw hailed the advent of the Germans as a deliverance. As a matter of fact, pictures taken on the roads north of Russia show the Russians well clothed and apparently well fed and in good order retiring at their leisure. There is nothing to be seen in these photographs of the headlong haste attributed to them by the inspired portion of the press. In fact, from all the stories at hand it is possible to glean the truth that Von Hindenburg's great drive has been a failure as far as the capture of any great portion of the Russian army is concerned.

It is also very patent that a city like Warsaw out of which more than 400,000 Russian Poles fled at the approach of the German army is not extending a very hearty welcome to the invader. Under these circumstances it is by no means incorrect to state that the occupation of Vilna, of which so much has been made has not been in any sense a sweeping victory for Germany over Russia. The Russians are never more formidable than when in retreat. Retreating is almost their national tactics; but that they can turn and rend the foe who may venture too closely to their flank is seen in the strong initiative they have of recent days been manifesting. In the south the Russians have forced back the German army corps. The Russian field army still practically intact faces the Kaiser's men in Poland and holds them there with a grip that is amazing.

By this time the winter must be coming on. That is no time for operations and it is doubtful if the Germans can force the Russians to any decisive action before they will be glad themselves for a respite from the cruel Russian winter.

As a matter of policy the Russians are helping at this time to protect the Roumanian frontier. By this time it is being more than hinted that the dispatch of Grand Duke Nicholas to the Caucasus was part of a Russian plan for a strong pushing forward of Russian troops in various directions, as a screen of defense to the capital of Roumania.

There is nothing just at present that points to a crisis having been reached in Europe; but various moves are going on that may go far to determine the future course of the war.

Most people should be willing to profit by others' mistakes. The shrewd business man gets his training largely by observing the results of the business exploits of others.

CULTIVATE VACANT LOTS

Who can give any good reason why vacant lots are not cultivated in Glendale? The soil in these lots is just as fertile as it is outside of the city limits where large crops of vegetables and grains are grown. Some one arises and says that the cost of water is too high. The water does not cost, in many instances, more within the city limits than it does outside. The cause lies elsewhere. It may be attributed to a lack of proper management on the part of the owners of the lots.

If properly cultivated there is sufficient land in Glendale in the form of vacant lots to give employment to fifty men for a portion of the time each season. The products grown on these lots would aid in feeding many families. What is necessary is that the owners of the lots and the men needing employment get together on this very important question. It is more profitable by far for the owner of a lot to have his land under proper state of cultivation than to have it grow to weeds.

WHEN IS A BOYCOTT NOT A BOYCOTT?

The latest puzzle for the diplomatist to solve is the one, when is a boycott not a boycott says the Christian Science Monitor. The question has assumed an important phase in Japan, where, according to the information given to a correspondent by Senator Saulsbury, the decrease in Japanese imports to China assumed the colossal figures of $28,000,000 during the month of June. It now appears that this is not a question of any boycott but the result of the support of home industries. Up to now matches in large quantities have been imported from Japan into China. But there is now a home industry in China known as steel and flint, and apparently the Chinese are not boycotting the Japanese matches, they are simply supporting home industries in flint and steel. It seems to come perilously near the same thing—at all events so far as the manufacture of Japanese matches are concerned.

The word boycott is only thirty five years old, and yet it probably would puzzle a large number of people to explain its origin. In the year 1880 there was in Ireland a well known landlord named Captain Boycott. His differences with his tenants and with the Land League became so severe that the neighborhood declined to have any dealings with him. The result was something more than being sent to Coventry by the countryside, it included a refusal to have any commercial dealings whatever with the victim. The first known use of the word was by John Dillon in a speech at Cashel, on the 17th of November, when he made use of the phrase, "We have yet to study a branch of new land law known as boycotting." The term was at once picked up by the press, and passed immediately into common use, appearing three days later in the Times. It is now a common word in the language but its origin is already half forgotten.

ARMY OF TRAMPS

Chief of Police Herald is positive in his statements that the vanguard of the great army of tramps is on its way to Southern California. The fact is that stragglers of the invading host are seen occasionally in Glendale and will be seen here in greater numbers from this time all through the winter. It is estimated that fully 6000 wanderers of all kinds will enter Southern California in order to escape the cold of the Middle West and of the Northwest.

Many of these wanderers are doubtless harmless and in many ways to be pitied; but in the crowd of masterless men who will enter the state during the winter there are also criminals of the worst class, men who have already been guilty of serious crime and are prepared to brave even the extreme penalty of the law if by so doing they can secure the money necessary for their desires.

While society may have profound compassion for the waifs and strays whom hard times has thrown out on the road, it must defend itself against those who make a profession of beggary and under that cloak manage to rob houses and terrify communities.

The share that James J. Hill of Minnesota, financier and railway promoter in the northwest, has had in determining what the terms of the loan from citizens of the United States to the governments of Great Britain and France shall be, has been more than personal. Though not a farmer nor a politician, nor a "friend of the people" after the conventional manner, he has been able to insist in a somewhat symbolical way on what he thought were the interests of the producers of the staple food crops which these nations are buying and want credit for. Recalling not very ancient antipathies between farmers and railway builders and administrators, it is smile provoking to think of the changes time brings, so that championship of agrarian interests is left to the magnate of St. Paul, Minn. But it is no new role for Mr. Hill. He is alert always to make prosperous inhabitants of rural regions threaded by his carriers. His theory of making a railway rich and also popular seems to be to serve all causes that induce popular thrift, wealth and contentment.—Christian Science Monitor.

HORSES WITH HUGE CLAWS

The Arikee formation contains great numbers of bones of a peculiar type of animals called chalicotheres. They were larger than a horse and had a horse-like head, long front legs and shorter hind legs, but every foot had three toes, each of which in place of a hoof bore an enormous claw. An equally strange form of Miocene time is a deerlike animal called Syndyoceras. Its head somewhat resembled that of an antelope but was longer and had four horns, the larger pair, over the eyes, curving inward and the smaller pair, nearer the muzzle, curving outward. Camels were common in North America during the Miocene epoch, and several forms have been found. One was about the size of a sheep and is supposed to be the ancestor of modern camels and llamas. Others were large and had long necks like giraffe. All these ancient camels had hoofs like cattle, not broad cushioned feet like those of the camels of the present day. Rhinoceroses were abundant, and hundreds of specimens of Teleoceras, a very heavy-bodied, short-limbed type, have been found. The proboscidians, of which the elephant is the best-known type and the only living representative, became prominent during the Miocene epoch, when a large mastodon called Triliphodon was common. (Overland Guidebook, U. S. Geological Survey.)

No two persons are likely to be pleased with the same kind of entertainment. People's likes differ.

The world is harvesting greater cereal crops this year than ever before. But there will be no unneeded surplus.

UNIVERSITY LECTURES

Prof. Jerome Raymond, who is delivering a course of lectures under the auspices of the Berkeley university Extension Society, will give the first lecture of the course Saturday evening, October 16, in the High School auditorium, subject, "Rome and the Renaissance of Self Government in Italy." The second lecture will be given Oct. 23, subject, "Holland, the Birthplace of Civil and Religious Liberty." The third lecture will be on Oct. 30, subject, "Switzerland, the Triumph of Democracy."

"TAX ON THRIFT"

Senator Lawrence Y. Sherman of Illinois, presiding at today's session of the World's Insurance Congress, at San Francisco, assailed the taxation of insurance policies as a "tax on thrift."

"Insurance," he said, "is one of the greatest instruments to promote self support and protect the family known to civilized society. The legislator who sees in it only an enterprise to be burdened whenever taxes are to be laid has not analyzed well the relation between national strength and private individual support, the solvency of the family or its responsible head."

Senator Sherman urged that policy holders organize to protest against the imposition of "double taxation." He also advocated national uniformity of regulations affecting the insurance business and suggested an amendment to the constitution which will permit congress to handle the subject.

"Mutual defense against future unfriendly legislation is as meritorious as the modern protection given by the policies issued," he said. Let policyholders insist that any payment beyond a property tax except that covering the actual cost of supervision and inspection is unjust."

News concerning Villa would be much more interesting if backed by corroborative evidence.

Miss Bessie Van Osdoll, 416 Lomita avenue, who has been making a tour of the cities in the northern part of the state, returned home Saturday evening. Miss Van Osdoll visited also San Francisco and had a pleasant time at the fair.

"Continuous education" is a recent shibboleth of the Chautauqua idea, meaning, we are told, that it is never too late to learn. Time was in the United States when schooling ended with school days, and those who had it not said regretfully, "I hadn't any schooling." But now education is to be had on every tree, and is not a forbidden fruit to any. Furthermore learning is seen to be no exclusive possession of schools and schoolmen. We are all going to school all the time—to events, to each other, to the newspapers, to experience. Education is not a thing of books only. It is knowing how. The modern sense of it is hinted in the enormous propaganda in the single department of domestic economy. The trained housekeeper is an educated woman. The old wisdom of the chatelaine is at last put into a place of honor. Service is education. The supposedly most humble service has its technique, its law, its art. And with all this getting of knowledge and efficiency there is more and more understanding that work is not perfectly done till it goes to the music of a joyful heart.—C. S. Monitor.

FIRST M. E. CHURCH

It was "Dry" day at this church yesterday, the term relating to the subject considered, certainly not to the method in which it was presented by the speaker, Rev. Samuel Montgomery, who put into the usually hackneyed subject so much energy, emphasis, eloquence and new matter as to thrill the morning audience into responsive applause, as the facts and practical methods of agreed harmonious work was presented, in joint effort for making California dry in 1916.

Colonel John Sobieski, the speaker announced for the evening, failed to come by reason of a delayed eastern train, but his good wife came bringing with her a speaker not unknown for ability as an orator, Dr. Lyman B. Sperry, M. D., who from the standpoint of long practice as a physician, unloaded on his attentive audience an hour of facts in regard to alcoholic liquors and narcotics and the destructive and dwarfing tendency of the use of these on the human race as to startle his hearers and occasion frequent applause. The doctor regarded tobacco in its varied forms of use and especially the cigarette as more fatal in its work of hastening the "degeneracy of the race" than the use of alcoholic liquors, though vigorously condemning each as twin enemies of a clean, healthy manhood.

The loyal members are praying "Oh, Lord, send to us whom thou wilt, only come with him." Meantime Brothers Watson and Brockman are down at conference to help in the matter. We learn by wireless it is likely to a strong man, Sampson by name, but the Lord may change his mind. Brethren pray on.

METHODIST LADIES' AID

The Ladies' Aid of the First M. E. church will meet with Mrs. Phillips, Brand Blvd. and Third St. tomorrow afternoon instead of at the church as previously announced. Let every member be present. There will be election of officers.

CLEAN OFF WEEDS

Quite a large section of the city has now been cleaned of weeds. The gangs at work on this effort to make the city more sightly have made rapid progress. They are now working eastward on Third street, where there are some remarkable growths of wild flowers and shrubs of all kinds. In this section, however, there has been a hearty co-operation with the city authorities in the matter of weed destroying. The occupied lots are kept in excellent order anyway and many vacant lots have been attended to by their owners, who have done thorough work in cutting and burning. Mr. Redman has been attending to the preliminary work of marking out and placarding the lots to be cleared and the city gangs under Mr. Marek have followed. The whole of the city from Louise west to the limits has been cleared and the work of cleaning along to the east is not likely to be a very formidable business.

VEILED PROPHET PAGEANT

St. Louis is waiting for fall festivities week which will open Tuesday with the annual Veiled Prophet Pageant and Ball. Visitors from the territory commercially tributary to St. Louis are flocking into the city.

Veiled Prophet's parade and ball, an adaptation of the old southern pageant of King Rex, which originated in Mobile and also gave New Orleans the Mardi Gras idea, will cost $60,000, furnished by anonymous business men. It is the big event of the social year in St. Louis.

A river carnival on the Mississippi, the St. Louis Agricultural fair, an automobile show, conventions of the American Meat Packers' and the Farm Mortgage Bankers' associations, a special concert by the Boston Symphony orchestra, special buy-in-St. Louis week displays and special exhibits of historical, artistic and botanical objects are scheduled. In addition the grand opera season will be begun Oct. 11.

TYPES OF SOLDIERS

A new type of soldier is just beginning to appear in London.

They are big brown men, wearing sun helmets and short knickers and who walk about with their sleeves rolled up. They are some of General Botha's men who helped clean up German Southwest Africa and who are so anxious to get into real action that many have "trekked" at their own expense all the way from South Africa to London to enroll in English regiments.

DRY FARMING EXPLAINED

Dry farming as the most promising field in agricultural science was extolled by Congressman Frank Mondell of Wyoming, president of the International Dry Farming congress when it opened its tenth annual session at Denver, Colo., today. The meeting was held in connection with the International Soil Products exposition which opened a week ago.

The dry farmer, according to Mondell's definition, is one who farms in regions of less than twenty-five inches of normal or average rainfall. Since irrigated farming presents such widely different problems, President Mondell disapproved of the suggestion that the organization he heads be united with the International Irrigation congress which lately met on the Pacific coast.

Tickets for the musicale to be given at the Littlelands club house Oct. 9 are now on sale at the postoffice, library and at Sunland. An enjoyable evening is promised as Miss Methfessel, contralto, and Mrs. Minnie Dunn, pianist, are musicians of exceptional ability.

"You're a bunch of white livered cowards," is one of the Canadian's favorite terms. "You are afraid to fight, if you weren't you wouldn't be here," he shrieks. He believes that gentle appeals don't get results and he is always direct to the point of harshness. He is a veritable "Bill Sunday" for army converts" and he seldom ends a speech with less than a dozen law clerks following him to the nearest recruiting station.

Niemeyer uses plain North American language on his crowds. Standing, usually at noon day, on a box in Temple Bar on the base of Gladstone Memorial in the Strand, he delivers straight hammer blows at all before him who show any resemblance to soldier material.

Political predictions for 1916, made now, are away below par.

PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE SWIMMING POOL SANITATION IS NECESSARY

Ninety-one large municipalities in the United States have established public swimming pools to meet the demand for knowledge of swimming. Swimming pools are on the increase. The United States public health service publishes an article by Wallace A. Manheimer, PhD., of Columbia University on the results obtained from a careful examination of six swimming pools.

It is pointed out in the report that in swimming in polluted water typhoid fever, conjunctivitis and other diseases may be acquired. The report gives in detail the results of the bacterial analyses made of the various pools and of the effects of refiltration and chemical disinfection.

It is pointed out that when the water is unfiltered it is apt to be cloudy, thereby making the danger of accidental drowning great. When refiltration is practiced the water becomes clear and this danger is obviated.

The report concludes that the cubic capacity of a pool affects its sanitary condition; that the process of adding dilution water is an efficient means of reducing the number of bacteria in the water, and that the supervision of the plant and the class of attendants are also important factors in pool sanitation. The combination of refiltration and disinfection by the use of calcium hypochlorite renders the sanitary condition of the water excellent.

Many of the colleges and secondary schools of the United States have as a graduation requirement a proven ability to swim. This important field of athletics should be surrounded by every sanitary safeguard.

HOW EDITORS GET RICH

A great many persons have wondered how editors all get rich so quickly with such small effort. One of them who has grown rich has at last told the secret of it. He outlines it as follows:

"Nursery firm will send up a thirty-five cent rosebud for only $5 worth of advertising.

"For running a six inch advertisement for one year we can get a gross of pills.

"About one dozen firms are wanting to give us shares of gold mines for advertising.

"For $40 worth of advertising and $35 cash we can own a bicycle. The wheel sells at just $12.

"A fellow out west wants us to run a lot of advertising for him for nothing and if it brings him results he may become a customer.

"For running $12 worth of locals we can get two tickets admitting us to a circus in the city and pay our own fare on the railroad.

"Gun firm wants us to run $19 worth of advertising and then send $10 in exchange for a shotgun. Such a gun would retail at about $6.—Brooklyn Eagle.

THE HEROES DOWN BELOW

(Chicago Herald)

"All the men who remained down deserved twenty Victoria crosses. They were real heroes a thousand times over."

Here is a genuine tribute from a brave man, Captain William Finch of the Arabic, to the other brave men who have gone before. The world may well pause with Captain Finch, regardless for the minute of the weighty international matters tied up in the fate of the ship, to honor the enginemen who yielded up their lives that others might live.

There is a mighty force in the tradition of the sea. Praise, and great praise, belongs to the leaders such as the captains of the Titanic, the Lusitania and the Arabic, the seamen who stand on the bridge until the ship sinks beneath their feet. But what of the humbler men, the unknown, who, deep in the heart of the great vessels, ignorant of what is portending, shut off from the sea and sky, continue at their service? Without glamour, without cheers, grimly facing hard mechanical tasks, they strive on until the last moment.

They might seek the coward's safety. With impunity often, without criticism, they might climb out of the dark hole for a man's conflict with the waters. But like caged animals they choose to die. The men below are heroes a thousand times over. They are the backbone of the world.

England's champion arm recruiter is Sergeant Neimeyer, a Canadian, who, despite his Teutonic sounding name, has induced, within three months, more than 3000 Londoners to join the colors.

WHO THEN CAN BE SAVED?

An earnest gospel sermon was preached Sunday evening in the First Baptist church on Mark 10:26, "Who then can be saved?"

A rich young man wanted to know what to do to inherit eternal life. The Master told him to keep the commandments. When the young man averred that he had from his youth up observed the law the great teacher further counseled him to sell his possessions and give to the poor and follow him. Riches proved their supremacy as ever and the rich young man remained a beggar for eternal life.

Turning to his disciples the Christ remarked how hard it is for a rich man to enter the kingdom, that the operation of a camel passing through the eye of a needle seemed more reasonable than the salvation of a rich man. His remarks provoked from the lips of the disciples the query, "Who then can be saved?" The Christ answered: "With men it is impossible, but not with God; for all things are possible with God."

Had the rich young man followed Christ with the rest of the little company, followed him through Gethsemane and the judgment hall beyond to Calvary, there to view the bleeding suffering Saviour in anguish bearing the burden of the sins of all mankind, clearly would he have seen that faith in the lamb of God alone atones for sin and to the dying soul imparts eternal life. "Follow me" was the last injunction of the Saviour to the rich young man. "All things are possible with God" was the assurance vouchsafed the astonished disciples. Calvary is the answer to both of these statements.

"And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness even so must the Son of Man be lifted up; that whosoever believeth may in him have eternal life." John 3:15.

No hyper-Calvinist is so versed in the book of fate as to tell who are the elect. Rowland Hill when he was advised to preach only to the elect, said, "I would certainly do so if some one would chalk them all on the back first." If we are elect we will read it first in the face of Christ; and he who looks to Christ shall be saved. There is life for a look at the crucified one.

No man is too low to be saved. Al Jennings is now preaching the gospel to thousands in New York City. Though he were a murderer yet could he be saved. How about David and the thief on the cross? True, no murderer can enter the kingdom. When, however, Christ saves and sanctifies the soul the murderer becomes a saint with angels fit to dwell.

No man is too weak to be saved. Jim McCoy was as low in the scale as brute can fall. Alive with vermin and caked with filth, sleeping in abandoned sheds, poisoned with alcohol, he nevertheless respected the rights of decent people sufficient to shuffle into the gutter to let respectable pedestrians pass by. We engaged him to clean out the cellar of the parsonage and so strong was the stench of his vile body and running sore that Mrs. Troy protested when she found her home saturated with the rottenness. Good Deacon Wright never abandoned the hope of the conversion of Jim. All others viewed the once prosperous mechanic as a total wreck. Not so with Sam Wright. Finally a place was found where Jim's sore leg could be dressed. Sunday afternoons Deacon Wright made his regular call on Jim. One day with radiant face Mr. Wright announced the conversion of Jim. There were many skeptics. Months rolled by. Jim was still a professed Christian. On a Sunday afternoon never to be forgotten Jim turned up at the men's Bible class. It required a second look to convince those present that it was actually Jim. What a transformation. A dignified gentleman past middle life, clothed in his right mind, and good Deacon Wright happy in the conversion of another soul. "Who then can be saved?"

Any man who puts his faith in Jesus Christ. No man is too low to be saved.

"From all that dwell below the skies
Let the Creator's praise arise.
Let the Redeemer's praise be sung
Through every land, by every tongue.

"Eternal mercies are thy ways,
Eternal truth attends thy words,
From shore to shore sound forth his praise
Till suns shall set and rise no more."

CHICAGO SPECIAL COMING

Tonight at midnight the Chicago special pulled out of Union station, Chicago for the west. It was Mayor Thompson's second western trip and visit to the Panama Pacific exposition at San Francisco.

The party, which included city and state officials, will stop off at Omaha, Denver, Salt Lake City, Cheyenne, Wyo., and Ogden, Utah. The party probably will reach San Francisco October 9, which will be Chicago day. Chicago day was postponed from July 24 in memorium of Chicago citizens who lost their lives in the Eastland disaster at Chicago on that date.

EYES ON WORLD'S SERIES

All things considered the Red Sox and Phillies will go into the coming world's clash about even as to infields. Fred Luderus' terrific hitting is somewhat offset by the superior fielding ability and all around finish of Jack Barry, and so far as the rest of the inner works are concerned it appears to be about a draw—judging solely from the way ability is reckoned in cold figures.

There is no difference worth speaking of in the combined batting and fielding averages of the two infields. Both have been slugging the ball around a .260 gait, and the two fielding averages hover around close to .960. Comparisons, however, are held to be somewhat odious ever since the late lamented Braves walloped Cornelius McGillicuddy's $100,000 infield and priceless pitching staff.

There always is one thing that trips up the dope, and literally spills the beans. It can't be reckoned on, because there are no figures on it. It's the child of the heated moment—the totally unlooked for individual star that crops out in every world's series. Once upon a time it was Frank Baker. Then Joe Bush came along, and last year it was long, lean Hank Gowdy, whom fate had buffeted around the baseball world for a long time.

Gowdy, on dope, didn't stand a chance with the incomparable Wallie Schang this time last year. There were few places outside Boston's classic boundaries where the name would have been recognized on the street. But after the series even the music of the cats on the backyard fences was suspiciously drawled into the semblance of the lanky catcher's monaker. Hank had dubbed along all summer hitting around .240. Yet when the big test came it found him slugging .545 under the most supremely difficult conditions possible. Nobody had figured on Hank.

And there's probably several players with the Red Sox and Phillies whom nobody is figuring on. In the first place there are no figures. So many things can happen in a short series that it makes dope practically useless. Stars can go bad, as did Chief Bender in the series with the Braves last year; some lucky kid may fall into a pinch hit that wins a game—any number of things can happen.

New York critics are paying a lot of attention to the difference between the two fields, and are of the opinion vantage goes to Philadelphia. The Philly field is much shorter, which accounts to some extent for the great number of homers garnered by Gabby Cravath this season. Very few, or practically no balls are knocked out of the Boston park. Gabby is reported to have that fence distanced properly and is liable to stick one over in the grass any time. In a close battle, with a man on, that would just about wreck somebody's championship hopes. It is an undeniable fact that nearly all of Gabby's homers have been knocked while the Phillies were at home.

It looks like a remote factor before the series, but it would certainly assume elephantine proportions if it ever happened.

SUBMARINE CABLES

The first cable successfully laid extended from Valentia island, off the coast of Ireland, to Heart's Content, Newfoundland, about 2000 miles. The cable was landed on the American side on August 5, 1858, but was not ready for use till August 16. About 700 short messages were sent through it, but it entirely failed within a month. The fact was demonstrated, however, that direct communication under the ocean was possible, although few persons at that time believed that a submarine telegraph could be used for business purposes. Cyrus W. Field, to whose enterprise was due the laying of the first cable, thought differently. Not discouraged by this and other failures, he continued the work he had planned, interested London capitalists in it, and in 1863 succeeded in establishing submarine communication, which has never been interrupted.

THE CANDLE WICK

When the old-fashioned dips were in common use great annoyance was caused by the burnt wick standing upright as the fat disappeared, making a smoky flame, which necessitated a constant use of the snuffers. This trouble is avoided in the modern candle by the simple expedient of plaiting one side of the wick a little stiffer than the other. When it is left free, owing to the wax having burnt away, it naturally bends over to one side. Now at the extreme edge of the flame the gaseous products of the candle are mixed with excess of oxygen from the air, which attacks the solid substances in the wick and speedily changes them into oxides. This always keeps the wick the right length.

UNIFORM HEMS

It is a good idea, says Modern Priscilla, to adopt a uniform hem for all pillow cases, also for all curtains. Then you do not have to bother to match them when the wash comes back from the laundry. Another advantage is that often one slip will wear out before the other and the hems all being alike, one from each pair can be used together until all are worn out.

ECONOMY AND FASHION

PARIS.—Economy, philanthropy and fashion are all burning questions and they are all very closely allied. The consideration of the one necessarily brings into play the calls of the other two, and the result is, generally, bewilderment; for to be economical in a just way is not easy even for the cleverest of us.

A good many French women are talking about the new resolutions which are being made in England just now in the cause of economy, and their comments are instructive. A woman of fashion in the France of today avoids any display of fashion as scrupulously as she avoids any public entertainment; but the idea of putting herself into uniform on the plea of economy would never enter her head. She buys fewer clothes than usual, and she strikes a bargain with her dressmakers, milliners and furriers whenever she can. Not seldom her practical way of doing business is a form of economy and a kind of philanthropy on the ground that it helps both herself and her tradespeople to live. By continuing to keep up a certain appearance both in her person and in her household she encourages trade and enables domestic servants to earn their daily bread.

For the conscientious woman the finest of all philanthropy at the present moment is to pay her debts, and incalculable harm is done to hundreds of working women where this duty is neglected. If the debts are paid without giving to charity funds a very charitable act will be done.

The philanthropy which is expressed in spending wisely is not uncommon in France. and the fashion which makes economy a habit and not a chastisement has excellent material results. No women understand practical economy better than French women, and no women talk less about it in detail. The French woman is firmly convinced in the rightness of her doctrine and she takes no heed of what the rest of the world thinks about it.
